

Institute for Leaders in Development

University of Denver

Development Professionals

Unlock Your Leadership Potential

The Institute for Leaders in Development (ILD) at University of Denver identifies, prepares, and helps elevate Colorado's next fundraising leaders. The next class will join more than 200 alumni who have graduated since 2009.

The ILD experience includes in-depth classroom experiences and one-on-one mentoring. You'll explore relevant topics—including the development plan, financial management, major gifts, equity in fundraising, and leadership development—through lectures, group work, panel discussions, and case studies. The program culminates in a practical capstone project you can implement in your organization.

We welcome a diverse applicant pool from throughout Colorado. If you have 3+ years' of development experience in the nonprofit sector and a commitment to this work, visit our website to learn more. Scholarships, as well as travel assistance for those outside of the Denver metro area, are available.

Grow your network while learning skills to advance your career!

Program Impact

In a survey of alumni taken following participation in the program:

- 65% supervised staff
- 22% had received a promotion since participating
- 27% played a more significant leadership role in their organization

Visit us @ ILDColorado.org | Application Opens 2/23